

Video Services

The UConn Video Services Department, under the leadership of Director of Video Services David Kaplan, services the video and technological needs of the Connecticut football program, with its top of the line equipment and new video facilities in The Burton Family Football Complex.

The work of the video department provides the coaches and players with the best in scouting and teaching through thousands of hours of video that they shoot during the course of the year.

All work in the UConn Video Department is currently done with the DV Sport Advanced Digital Video Analysis System. The system is universally recognized as the best in the business and gives the UConn football staff the best preparation for scouting opponents, self-scouting and player development.

The system also enables each member of the UConn coaching staff to have their own video digital viewing system at their desk. It gives the coaching staff endless possibilities for cut-ups and gives them the ability to tailor videotapes to any specific player on the team.

The department also produces on the contest the official online video streaming service of the Division of Athletics – Huskies All-Access by AT&T. The service includes the live streaming of sporting events and press conferences in addition to the production of feature stories.

In addition, the department is responsible for the production of scoreboard video shows at Rentschler Field for football and the XL Center and Gampel Pavilion for men's and women's basketball.

The UConn Video Department includes Kaplan, Assistant Director of Video Services Jason Isenberg and Video Services Coordinators Keith Anderson, Chris Crooks and Lindsey Lemoine.